ABSTRACT

This document combines two semiannual publications and presents lists of Chicano-related materials recently acquired by the Coleccion Tloque Nahuaque within the Library of the University of California at Santa Barbara. The two checklists, for January through December 1983, list a total of 326 English and Spanish monographs, theses, conference proceedings, and research papers published from 1947 to 1983. Citations are listed alphabetically by author under broad subject headings and include author, title, date and place of publication, publisher, pagination, and library call number. The 32 subject categories appearing in the 1983 checklists are: archives, art (Mexico), arts, bibliographies, biography, cookery, dictionaries, education, emigration and immigration, film, fine arts, folklore, gerontology, guides and directories, health care, history, history (Mexico), language, library science, literature, literature (Mexico), media, medicine, mental health, philosophy, political science, psychology, religion, social science, theatre, United States-Mexico relations, and women. Other publications of the Colección Tloque Nahuaque:

Día de los Muertos: An Illustrated Essay and Bibliography.

Published as a collaborative work by the UCSB Center for Chicano Studies and the Colección Tloque Nahuaque of the University Library, included in this monograph is a historical essay by Dr. Luis Leal; a reprint of a rare essay on the Mexican illustrator José Guadalupe Posada, written by the artist Diego Rivera; and a research bibliography compiled by the staff of the Colección Tloque Nahuaque.

According to Leal, "The Day of the Dead has been remembered in the Southwest since the Mexican settlers came here in the 18th century. Instead of disappearing, amidst modern life and technology, in recent times this festivity has flourished and is now celebrated in most Chicano communities."

For readers interested in gaining a better understanding of a very intriguing and not very well-understood aspect of the Mexican/Chicano experience. In English and Spanish. 46 pages.

Forthcoming:

Chicanos: A Checklist of Serials

A new serials listing of Chicano Studies materials at UCSB is being developed for publication. This publication will provide the user with an up-to-date listing of our exact holdings, based on recent serial renewals, cancellations, and holdings inventory, both in hardcopy as well as microformat.

A Guide to Library Research in Chicano Studies

A helpful manual to guide students in carrying out research on Chicano Studies topics, as they attempt to locate and use appropriate library materials. This pathfinder provides an overview of the Colección Tloque Nahuaque, including a detailed review of its resources and services; on-line reference services in Chicano Studies; departmental resources of the UCSB Library; a selective list of appropriate subject headings and LC Classification numbers useful for locating materials on Chicanos; a useful guide to formulate a search strategy; selected Chicano reference sources, by type and by subject; and a list of selected general reference materials useful for researching Chicano topics.
